Caregivers and Depression

Do you care for a chronically ill person who also suffers with depression? If so, guard and protect your mental health. Research has shown that caregivers are more at risk for depression themselves if they care for a person with depression. Have a social support and psychological support system, and practice basic stress management skills. October 11, 2018, is National Depression Screening Day. It’s dedicated to education, reducing the stigma of depression, and encouraging people to get screened. Most professional counselors can screen for depression in minutes. Contact your EAP for a referral.

---

Plan for a Better Day Tomorrow

Try jotting down your to-do list for tomorrow before going to sleep tonight. You may sleep better. Surprisingly, the ritual helps you off-load thoughts and reduce worry, and stress less about what lies ahead. The research seems to support another often recommended productivity tip—planning ahead for the next day. This includes jotting down your schedule, deciding what you will wear, planning breakfast, and choosing the personal items you’ll take to work. Starting your day with less chaos, having time and a few mini-successes, and experiencing less stress in the morning can help you have a better day.

---

When a Family Member Is Arrested

The arrest of a family member for driving under the influence can be very upsetting. While taking steps to intervene, find an attorney, but try to see this as an opportunity to examine possible contributing factors, including signs or symptoms of an alcohol use disorder (alcoholism). Use the crisis to break the denial pattern you may have seen slowly emerge among family or friends. An assessment with a professional counselor can help with a diagnosis. There is no time like the present, because desperation, fear, and doing what it takes to never experience another arrest makes intervention possible. If the arrest could lead to conviction, most courts will be impressed with any self-initiated referral to treatment. Contact your EAP for guidance and support.

---

How to Ask for Less Micromanagement

Micromanagement is a common complaint among employees, but most micromanagement is not malicious. It stems from a lack of understanding of how to delegate. A micromanager may actually trust you, but it’s fear that keeps him or her from letting go. To intervene, don’t grow weary, stress out, or bark out your frustration. Instead, meet in private and explore the issue. If you have not done so before now, you’ll discover the solution is likely good communication about each of your needs. You may need two or three follow-up discussions to achieve consistency, but a few more small progress reports from you will usually resolve the issue.

---

Information in FrontLine Employee is for general informational purposes only and is not intended to replace the counsel or advice of a qualified health or legal professional. For further help, questions, or referral to community resources for specific problems or personal concerns, contact a qualified professional. Add “http://” to source links to follow. Link titles are always case sensitive. The views and opinions expressed herein are solely attributable to DFA publishing. None of the views or opinions expressed in this publication reflect the views or opinions of the NYS EAP or the NYS Governor’s Office of Employee Relations.
Respecting Personal Boundaries at Work

Respect in the workplace brings to mind things like tolerance, and awareness of diversity, and bias. But disrespect has its own issues that can impact productivity. One of them is not respecting the personal boundaries of a co-worker. Do you walk through a co-worker’s door unannounced, call after hours when he or she is at home, or sit in a chair close by while the coworker is on the phone, waiting your turn to speak with him or her? Employees who appreciate the importance of honoring personal boundaries will get along better. Here’s why: When you disregard personal boundaries, you send this nonverbal message: “I’m more important than you, so I don’t need to respect your space.” All of us teach each other what our personal boundaries are and how we want to be treated. Making them known is a combination of assertiveness, diplomacy, and immediacy. “I would love to speak with you right now, but I need to take this phone call in private,” combines all three elements of how to establish a personal boundary. The most important rule in maintaining personal boundaries is to practice what you preach. In other words, if you don’t want people phoning after 8 p.m. to discuss a work issue, don’t phone them after 8 p.m.

Exercise and Kudos for You

Having a physical fitness routine offers benefits for improved health and managing stress, but there are more benefits to exercise than the release of feel-good brain chemicals and shaking off tension. One less-appreciated payoff of exercise is achieving the goal of your exercise session, chalking it up as a success, and benefiting from the positive self-talk that accompanies it. Don’t minimize the impact of genuine self-kudos and the role they play in stress management. This one benefit is an additional motivational factor for participating in a regular exercise program. When we feel positive self-esteem, successes lie ahead. These linkages all contribute to improved personal and workplace productivity. You do have time for exercise. What may be missing are stronger reasons to get you moving. Add some positive self-talk to the mix and see if it doesn’t stir you to grab your sneakers.

Spice (or K2) is a dangerous psychoactive drug that is smoked, vaped, or drunk as a tea. It recently made national news when over 70 people using it overdosed within hours of each other in New Haven, CT. Spice is a mixture of plant materials like herbs and a lab-produced chemical that acts on the brain in a manner similar to THC. THC is the psychoactive substance in cannabis. These chemicals are far stronger than THC. Withdrawal from them is difficult, and addiction is more likely. Spice is dangerous and unpredictable, and no users can be sure of what they are consuming. Many drug screens still don’t detect Spice, which make it attractive to users. (That’s changing fast.) Spice is found nationwide, and much of it has been laced with fentanyl, which can cause death. If you are concerned about a family member or friend, or for yourself, contact your EAP.

Productivity Tip: Magic in Pocket Recorders

Tools for capturing thoughts—and listening to them—are among the most sought-after technologies. Tiny spiral notebooks of the past have been replaced by an abundance of options. One of the most progressive is the pocket recorder. These aren’t $290 anymore. They’re 29 bucks! And they record sharp, crisp sound with 20 hours or more of recording time. Search any online tech store to find dozens of choices. Five key productivity achievements are solved by small pocket recorders: 1) Capturing great ideas and to-dos; 2) Listening to reminders about those ideas and to-dos; 3) Eliminating “Gotta Remember This!” syndrome; 4) Reducing the stress of managing a to-do list; and 5) Making great use of waiting time—in lines, while commuting, or while engaged in repetitive activity like exercise.